Many electronic devices include one or more connectors for receiving a corresponding plug connector. Such connectors typically include one or more respective terminals for engaging corresponding terminal contacts of the plug connector when the plug connector is inserted into the connector. For example, FIG. 1 illustrates an example of a plug connector 10 mounted to an electronic device including a socket connector 12 adapted to receive the plug connector 10. The plug connector 10 includes a housing 14 defining a plurality of terminal modules 16 in which terminals 18 of the connector 10 are formed. Each terminal module 16 includes a plurality of terminals 18 engaging corresponding socket terminals 20 of the socket connector 12 when the plug connector 10 is inserted into the socket connector 12. Each terminal 18 includes a vertical beam 22 and a horizontal beam 24 extending between the terminals 18. The contacts of the terminal modules 16 are configured such that the vertical beams 22 are configured to engage portions of the socket contacts 20, and the horizontal beams 24 are configured to engage corresponding portions of the socket contacts 20. The vertical beams 22 and the horizontal beams 24 are formed to avoid portions thereof that would impede insertion of the plug connector 10 into the socket connector 12. Insertion of the plug connector 10 into the socket connector 12 may cause the plug connector 10 to be distorted. For example, as illustrated in FIG. 2, the vertical beams 22 may deform or deflect slightly when the plug connector 10 is inserted into the socket connector 12. In addition, as illustrated in FIG. 3, the horizontal beams 24 may bend or deflect due to forces applied thereto when the plug connector 10 is inserted into the socket connector 12. Such deflections may cause the terminals 18 to contact and damage the corresponding socket contacts 20. Damage caused by terminal deflections may result in the socket contacts 20 being shorted to other socket contacts, the socket contacts 20 being removed from the socket connector 12, or the socket contacts 20 being otherwise damaged. As noted above, the terminal modules 16 are generally formed at a curved portion of the housing 14. Such a configuration may further exacerbate the tendency of the terminals 18 to deform or deflect as the plug connector 10 is inserted into the socket connector 12.

is a GTK+ 2.x program for the GNOME project. GNOME is a free desktop environment for Unix-like operating systems such as Linux, BSD, the OS/2 operating system Warp 4, and other proprietary Unix-like systems. GNOME is designed to be a complete alternative to X-Windows. GNOME is a complete, integrated desktop environment, which includes a taskbar, a panel, preferences dialogs, file manager, and easily accessible system tools. It isn't tied to a particular graphics windowing system such as X Window, but rather expects to be used with existing windowing systems. GNOME focuses on functionality for users, not programmatic features for programmers. If you have any screenshots of GNOME and/or was it taken easily, I wish to post it. You are truly most welcome of course,! Up-to-date Wayland support under integrated graphics on top of LESS integrated graphics if you disable hardware acceleration. What breaks its maining factor of being an aggressive, fast, lightweight window manager, is in fact that without hardware acceleration i.e. H.A. the performance will suffer. the latest version of LESW 0.9.3-alpha works much better though and its the one I used. I'm going to install 0.8.4-precise today, but I was very confused by the packaging, the xfce-base and xfce-session package listed as depends are not installed out-of-box. mhg-office has it right, xfce4-session should install them. The 0.9.2 release notes seems to be outdated (0.9.2 is from 2014), but you may want to have a look at those. Edit: "Since June 12 2015, LXQt now features an automatic compositing backend, "For Lubuntu 15.10 with LXQt we'll now have automatic composite and Xwayland support built-in, just like Kubuntu and MATE." I noticed, you may want to have a look in /etc/xdg/lxsession/LXDE/autostart, as it should contain the above mentioned files you need. Ok I got it now, as usual the I didn't read the cmake script... It didn't work at all for me though, I tried
