It is currently in production, with over 1,000 aircraft in service. The Citation III was a response to the turboprop-based Citation Bravo, the piston-engine-powered Citation X, the all-business Citation XLS and the twin-turboprop-powered Citation Sovereign. Design and development The Cessna Citation III was developed in response to the demand for a larger, more powerful business jet than the Citation II. It had to be a single-engine jet to attract market share away from the twin-engine Citation XLS. The Citation III was designed to retain the maximum level of design and operational convenience and cost reduction possible from the Citation II. At the same time
