For the first time, players are able to feel the impact of collisions that occur in the heat of the moment. This will impact how players engage with the game and will encourage players to rush the ball forward and try to score more goals than they normally would. Player movement will also feel more responsive, as players on attack can make better choices when dealing with their opponent. "We are pushing boundaries in FIFA gameplay to create an authentic, realistic experience. This season's new features will not only help fans to better enjoy the gameplay but they will also teach players of all ages how to play football the way real football is played," said Shaikh. The New Manager FIFA 22 introduces a host of new Manager actions and Manager Playbook options. By taking the biggest change yet in the direction of FIFA's Manager Playbooks, players are encouraged to lead their teams to glory with the help of the new playbook sets, bringing new ways to play the game to life. In the first season of the new Manager Playbook system, six new playbook sets will be included: Standard, Attack, Counter-Strike, Counter-Strike-Presnap, Counter-Strike-Long Shot, and Defending. Each playbook set has its own style of play, bringing a new dimension to game play. These playbook sets can be switched between on the fly as players progress through the match, giving their team the option to maintain and adapt their play style on the fly. The new Player Actions menu features additional coaching tools that can be activated on the fly, such as quick-time editing and post-match replays, to help players on the pitch. Player Actions The Player Actions menu will have a new post-match replay system, allowing players to review and analyse the game post-match and make on-the-fly adjustments to their tactics. Moreover, players are able to review and edit the action in an instant replay, which will help them to make their decisions with greater speed and accuracy, with better information at their fingertips. During the course of the match, players can use quick-time editing to change their pre-planned actions, such as a cut-back or a pass from one position to another, to a more suitable move. Players can also stop players from in-play actions, using the Post-match section in the

Q: Accessing the platform name in a third-party class? In my Android project I have some third-party code that looks up things like the app's package name and device name. I'd like to use one of those two pieces of information in a resource, but I'm not sure how to get it. I have a "master" package, with some subpackages, one of which is for a game (com.myapp.game). That is where I'd like to get information that I can use for an image. How would I reference the package name? If not possible, what about the device name? Right now, I have: Resources resources = getResources(); Drawable image = resources.getDrawable( R.drawable.ic_launcher );

Edit: I found a list of these details from the PackageManager class. The device name of an app looks like this: PackageManager pm = getPackageManager(); String packageName = "com.google.android.geo.GooglePlay.Y"; // This gets the device name PackageInfo pInfo = pm.getPackageInfo(packageName, 0); Any ideas how to access the device name inside of my code? A: I think you need to use PackageInfo class. You can
